National Aquarium Coming

Winding its way from New York through Pennsylvania to the Chesapeake Bay, the Susquehanna River is alive with recreational and educational opportunities. Vividly linking the Susquehanna with the Chesapeake, the National Aquarium will bring its traveling tanks of river and bay creatures to this area's Susquehanna River Celebration, Saturday, June 19, 10 to 4 p.m., Fort Hunter Park.

Spectacular, folk music, live, historical, and water sports entrepreneurs will be on hand - all are certain to find SOMETHING of interest at this "Carnival-to-Appel-to-Just About Everyone" fifth Susquehanna River Celebration. Rain or shine, free charge.

This is an opportunity for all ages to come out, have fun, and learn about and enjoy the river as a living system. The Pennsylvania Rivers and Wildlife Association brings a live bald eagle for an up-close and personal look at the high-flying world of the eagle. Electroshocking by experts in the river will temporarily stun fish so that they can be more easily caught and examined. Free canoeing will be offered. Live music, acrobatics and flying demonstrations, and exhibits and events from River Trivia Games to solar cooking, Indian history, river talks, poetry walks, film, slide shows and "photovoice" cell energy demonstrations will take place throughout the day, free of charge. Public well and spring water samples can also be brought for testing on site, in DCR's Mobile Nutrient Lab.

Over 40 organizations will be present with exhibits, walks and talks, and public information. Dillsburg's Countywide storyteller Dick Humphries will delight children (all ages) with stories and games. Experts will volunteer their time to lead ecology walks, plant walks, insect walks - and give talks on spider web building, amphibians, rivers, and much more! There is no admission charge for the celebration or any of the events or exhibits. Food will be available for purchase through concession stands, and some tickets to the Chesapeake Blue Crab Feast may be available for purchase the day of the Celebration (advance orders strongly suggested). Call 236-8825 as soon as possible.

Nautical traffic laws

It was a beautiful June weekend with temperatures in the high 60s. A gentle morning breeze blew, creating ripples on the lake's glassy surface. The parking lot near the ramp was almost full. Fishermen, sailors and canoeists were already enjoying the water when the power boats began to launch their jet skis and sail boats. The anglers and paddlers were now staying close to shore to avoid the fast moving traffic on the water.
